Ill be as stingy as you please, and think three times before I give sixpence to Charlie Dixon. , There you go, sir; but make fun if you will. Im glad enough to hear you do it. So its a bargain, Master Theodore. Ill see the people are comfortable, and youll keep your money in your pocket till I ask for it, or till you feel that it is right to give it. You know well enough, sir, when youre being imposed on, and that makes it all the more wrong in you to give. All right; dont be afraid. Theres, my father calling! Good-bye! and thank you ever so much. CHAPTER XV. MASTER AND PUPIL. But all was false and hollow, though his tongue Dropped manna, and could make the worse appear The better reason. Milton jHEODORE is very glad to return to Mr. Cliffords, for many reasons. Home has been very dull since he has grown to like boys society, and now he is feeling more sure of himself--more willing to take his place among the boys, as one of themselves, and no longer to hold aloof as he has done. Venables meets him with evident pleasure, and Theodore is glad to see him. Somehow, face to face with Rip, it is difficult to remember those dark hints which Rogers had thrown out. Rogers has not yet returned; he has sprained his knee, and will not come to Beacbcroft House for another week. Lupton...
